The Cooke Group

The Cooke Group is a long-established engineering company which specialises in pattern-making and casting. Their services are used by many major motor car manufacturers. Their founder, Bill Cooke, had a great passion for vintage and veteran cars, and in particular the Bullnose Morris. The firm is now in the safe hands of his son John, who is also a veteran and vintage car enthusiast with an expert knowledge of all things Morris and is a great supporter of The Early M.G. Society.

We should remember that many of the consumables that we need for our cars are available from Cookes. Gaskets, water hoses, components for engines, transmission, brakes and chassis parts are available "off the shelf". It's as well to remember their speedy postal service when we need something urgently. John Cooke will always do what he can to help out.

Cookes re-manufacture components that are no longer available from stockists. These components range from engine, radiator, transmission and chassis components, through to brake parts, coachwork fittings, new wings and even complete bodies. Many of these Morris components are suitable for M.G. 14/28, 14/40 & 18/80 models – for example – new half-shafts for 14/28, 14/40 and Mk I 18/80s.

John will be pleased to hear from any owner of an early M.G. who might require parts from stock, or who wishes to have a new component manufactured.

Please contact John with your enquiry on 0116 288 1234 or by e-mail cookejohn@hotmail.com
